Research workshop for undergraduate and post-graduate students

EXPLORING RESEARCH AREAS IN LINGUISTICS

This session aims to provide an overview of major and emerging areas of research in linguistics, while helping students identify and refine their research interests. Further, at the end of this session, the students will be able to formulate research questions and understand basic research methodologies in linguistics.

The session will briefly cover core fields (Phonetics & Phonology, Morphology, Syntax, Semantics), applied areas (sociolinguistics, psycholinguistics, computational linguistics), and emerging domains such as discourse analysis, digital communication, and language policy. Special emphasis will be placed on research opportunities in Indian languages, including Konkani.
